Subject: Ratepayer concerns

I encourage you to facilitate ratepayer participation rather than obstructing it. Ratepayers voices must be heard in utility regulation; especially because the Division of Public Utilities and Committee of Consumer Services aren't representing consumers' interests effectively; If the Commission is going to change its rules, the amendments should facilitate the participation of individual customers and groups, not impede them. Also if the Commission decides each participating individual or group must be represented by an attorney, either the Commission or the utility should pay those costs.
 Thank you,
 Mandi Corey
